

We Can't Change: Understanding That the Needs of Children with Autism May Be Different to Others

The course will include:

- Why might children with Autism behave in unexpected (and sometimes challenging ways)
- What might be the preferred ways of socialising (or not socialising)
- How might communication differ in children with Autism and how should we adapt our expectations
- Understanding and coping with body language
- An investigation into hoodies and alternative fashion

Course Outcomes...

This training is supported by case studies and workshop activities during which each delegate will learn to:

- Understand that children with Autism may behave in different ways for a range of sensory and communication related conditions
- Understand and apply the fact that all behaviour is communication
- Understand that the children that need the most support may communicate that need in unexpected and unusual ways
- Accommodate and understand the differing needs of children with Autism
